■ Whether an exhibitor is here at the Greater New York Dental Meeting for its first year or its 95th, the mission is the same: Grab some attention in the packed exhibit-hall aisles with a great-looking booth, fun or practical giveaways, can't-miss deals, innovative products and services – or by deploying all of the above.

The strategy holds as true as ever in this 95th edition of the meeting, with examples around every corner of the expansive exhibit hall.

Lively education

By Robert Selleck, today Staff

■ Workshops and courses in the classrooms encircling the GNYDM exhibit hall were busy throughout the day Sunday, and the demonstrations in the Live Dentistry arena on the exhibit floor saw the usual standing-room only crowds.

A packed agenda continues today, with the exhibits area continuing to complement the meeting's comprehensive selection of educational sessions that cover virtually every sector of dentistry and oral health.

Today's live-dentistry sessions include "Blending New Technology for Predictable Dentistry," "Guided Veneer Delivery System" and "The Light Dentistry Concept – Invisalign Go and DSD Direct."

Two more live-demonstration sessions are scheduled on Tuesday and again on Wednesday.

etary product available nowhere else: a thermoformable plastic material with integrated graphics that can be used by dental practices or labs to make retainers, mouthguards and aligners that are custom decorated for individual patients. Choices in graphics include soccer balls, footballs, basketballs, skulls, unicorns, paw prints, peace signs and more. Stop by the booth to get all the details, and, of course, to pick out a giveaway or two: hand sanitizer, breath spray, pens and pads.

In both No. 4904, another unique opportunity awaits: Ansell's ERGOFORM™ Design Technology, MICRO-FLEX Ultraform, is the first ergonomic examination glove to be offered in half sizes. According to the company, the gloves provide every wearer with a personalized fit, and the thin, lightweight nitrile material provides protection and tactile sensitivity. And better still, when you visit the booth, you can receive a half-size sample to test out the tailored fit for yourself.

If finding the big discounts is core to your exhibit-hall strategy, look no further than booth No. 1015, where RGP is offering eye-catching percentage discounts, a free standard "ultraleather" upgrade and a rebate offer on every chair purchased at the meeting. Plus, every purchase includes a 30-day trial period and a lifetime warranty on mechanical components.

If you're scoping out the various raffles that highlight many of the booths, one of the most enticing ones can be found in booth No. 4532, where qualifying dentists can enter a drawing for a Wand STA instrument from Milestone. The drawing will be Wednesday at 3 p.m., and the winner must commit to a training session — with all necessary supplies provided by Milestone. See all the rules in the booth — and learn more about the Wand STA, which is being demonstrated. Note, too, that all qualifying dentists who view the demonstration will be presented with a parting gift.

Just two more days until the exhibit hall closes for another year, so be sure to grab these deals and more while they're available.

• Attendees at the 95th annual Greater New York Dental Meeting await the countdown to the opening of the exhibit hall Sunday morning, the first day of the 2019 meeting's four days of exhibits.
