Recollections of seasons past and present

By David L. Hoexter, DMD, FACD, FICD
Editor in Chief

Reflections this time of year may evoke a simulacrum of dental meetings with innovations, such as the presentation of new techniques (revived and modernized from dental cosmos publications) or new-again computerized mechanisms to treat patients.

Perhaps it may evoke the excitement of seeing our kith and colleagues once again, while laughing over past experiences. Usually, large gatherings of dentistry are destined to place in large, new convention centers. We may recall previous meetings held in large hotels, warmer and more personal, and reminiscent of some personal history.

Now, large dental meetings command large convention halls, acquiring more economic support. These convention centers have different size rooms that are adaptive to different crowds, computerized luxuries that detail all that we need to know without asking questions, and details of where and who will be presenting, and which group is actually meeting and at what time. Still, they are impersonal and all-consuming.

I inquire, while reading the myriad list of organizations listed at our meetings, "Where did all of these initials come from?" Societies, study clubs and state organizations — state ones next to national, adjacent to international, with so many initials.

While the daylight disappears earlier, there is a slight coolness in the air, and the excitement of seeing friends grows once again, I think of hugging a classmate, a teacher, a lost colleague, and it brings a smile as a leaf starts to descend.

The article "Alphabet Soup" I had written previously with enthusiastic reception, is being republished in this edition and perhaps will be published annually until the ocular rift dental meeting inundates our dental assemblies.

Alphabet soup

Proposed: Colorful communications

By David L. Hoexter, DMD, FACD, FICD,
Editor in Chief

A dilemma. We now have so many dental groups that we have almost run out of letters of the alphabet. As group after group abbreviates its name, we are at a loss to tell one from another without a scorecard. Either we need a new alphabetical language or more exotic sounding dental organizations with as yet, unused letters.

History relates its alphabet beginnings to Mesopotamia, where early transcribers used grooved lines on a bulla, or gourd-like container. These scratches of lines became the beginnings of written communication.

Flashing forward to mobile communications of today, where time pressures have abbreviated words, and we have a lingo all of its own: Abbreviating is a modern necessity.

To begin with, you cannot tweet — under twittering rules — over a certain number of characters. Also, texting sophistication requires not only abbreviating, but also doing it creatively, to stump the recipient.

Fortunately, having a college-aged daughter has given me a little heads up in this language. For example, CUL means "see you later" and POS means "parent over shoulder." Everyone is in a rush — but to where? Tired thumbs? And communication stands in line behind speed.

There is a definite division, albeit not a sharp one, between the Baby Boomers and the computer generation, sometimes alluded to as "nesters." Whereas Baby Boomers enjoy direct personal communication, nesters prefer computer communication. Abbreviations then become even more important.

We are running out of letters to distinguish the plethora of dental organizations. A rebus should represent a meaning, or a riddle perhaps. The ADA, for example, stands for American Dental Association. But, it could also represent the American Dermatological Academy.

Dental Tribune graphic created at www.wordle.net

DAVID L. HOEXTER, DMD, FACD, FICD, is director of the International Academy for Dental Facial Esthetics, and a clinical professor in periodontics at Temple University, Philadelphia. He is a diplomate of implantology in the International Congress of Oral Implantologists as well as the American Society of Osseointegration, and a diplomate of the American Board of Aesthetic Dentistry. Hoexter lectures throughout the world and has published nationally and internationally. He has been awarded 11 fellowships, including FACD, FICD and Pierre Fauchard. He maintains a practice at 654 Madison Ave., New York City, limited to periodontics, implantology and esthetic surgery. He can be reached at (212) 355-0004 or drdavidlh@gmail.com.

At least the GNYDM, representing the largest dental meeting in the U.S., has unique letters in its title and will not be confused with any other group.

There is also the ERA mini implant, not to conflict with the ERA in baseball. By the way, has anyone ever seen a maxi implant? Between the AACD, ASDA, AADE and AAID, one wrong initial and you're in the wrong state or country and have to pay new dues. The ESC, Eastern Society of Cariology, must not be confused with the ESC, European Society of Cardiology.

The idea of written language is to give unique connotation to words. Abbreviating these words with initials not only obviates the communication, but makes it confusing. Abbreviations have become the teratogen of communication.

To help ameliorate this confusion I am proposing a Hoexter's Index (HI), which will not only speed up communication, but will satisfy tweeters and texters alike. I propose that we assign a color to every dental specialty. For example, I suggest burgundy for general practitioner, red for periodontics, green for implants, yellow for oral surgery (and maxillofacial), orange for onodontics, blue for esthetics, black for pathology, gray for dental materials, pink for orthodontics and pedodontics, and brown for prosthetics.

This way, each respective group would be required to use that color in its initials. When publicizing an AO meeting, we would recognize that an AO meeting was for the Academy of Osteointegration, an implant group, as compared to an AO meeting, which would be for Alpha Omega, a dental fraternity group. Also, we would know that AAP represents the American Academy of Periodontics, which would not be confused with the AAP, or the American Association of Prosthodontics. Unfortunately, unless we have a color chart, we will be just as confused, but it will be much more colorful.

This is only a suggestion, and any thoughts or other solutions would be received and considered for publication as well. There is an obvious problem. Let us communicate and help correct it.

To conclude, Rodney Dangerfield, the famous comedian, once described his son eating alphabet soup that his wife, a horrible cook, had made. The boy separated letters to spell "HELP."

Let's help our profession abbreviate with colorful understanding. OK?

PROUDLY MADE IN THE USA U.S. Design Patent No. D696,708

DrQuickLook SD for everyday use

By Dr. Bob Clark, Founder, DrQuickLook

As a practicing dentist of more than 34 years, I want to buy products that have an impact on my practice. As inventor of DrQuickLook™ products, I am asked about how these intraoral cameras are used in my practice. I recently transitioned to our latest and greatest units — DrQuickLook SD Basic and SD Plus. I thought I would try to relate my office usage to some issues that come up all too often in the practice. See if any of these ring a bell!

“My cap fell out.” How many times have you heard that refrain? And how many times was it truly a cap having fallen out? More likely it fractured at the gumline and the understructure you spent so much time fabricating is now level with the gumline. You can either tell the patient the circumstances and recommend extraction or try to perform some heroics to salvage the crown and the tooth for an unknown period of time. Either way, the patient is going to think that there was a whole lot of tooth there and you just wanted to charge them an extraordinary amount for what you did. So what's the answer? Easy — DrQuickLook SD Basic or our SD Plus model.

When that case walks into my office, the patient visit will begin with a clear look at the inside of the crown then a look at the remaining tooth structure. I don't mean one look — I mean several views to show everything and leave no stone unturned. Images of the internal crown and the tooth structure are saved for future review. Even if you show the patient everything — and I mean everything — you know in your heart that they will come back with the thought that the tooth really wasn't that bad. I love the Quick Draw feature on the SD Plus model here because it allows me to highlight the really critical parts of any image. Yes, I save them too. So here's to sleeping better at night and making sure your patients see what you see! I'll make a confession here. I don't take the images or do the transfer personally. DrQuickLook SD products are so easy to use, my staff does all the work.

Taking before and after images of a restorative procedure is a great idea. But one thing has been left out, and it's the most important one: It's the “middle image.” Once an old amalgam restoration has been removed, we often (meaning always) see recurrent decay and lots of fracture lines. The patient, however, thinks that once the filling is out, the tooth is pristine again — just like new. How far from the truth is that!

I always have the assistant take an image before I enter the operatory. When the filling is out I grab my DrQuickLook SD Plus and within 10 seconds have a couple of images of the grisly remains. I then restore the tooth with a beautiful new restoration. Before I leave the room I like to personally show the patient the “middle image(s)” and highlight the problem areas — fractures, thin remaining enamel or maybe an exposure — with our Quick Draw feature. Drawing on the images is powerful and will focus the patient. I then recommend further treatment (usually a crown) if needed or comment on potential issues (usually a root canal).

Once I exit the operatory, the assistant shows the patient the final restoration and compares it to the original. Transparency. Clarity. The patient knows everything I do. They know what they are paying for. All the images — including the ones I drew on — are saved for a time when the patient has curiously forgotten how bad things looked.

DrQuickLook SD models are the easiest way to prevent any misunderstandings and make your day a whole lot easier. Every day.

These are just a couple examples of how DrQuickLook SD Basic and SD Plus can improve your practice.
